Comments: I've recently moved to Pahrump being attracted by it's clean air, wonderful climate and Nevada's friendly, and affordable economy. There is no doubt of the growth in Las Vegas and it only follows that Pahrump being the fastest growing rural community is destined to be home to many Americans both young and old. The arguments against the storing of nuclear waste are many including the security of the site, transporting material to the site and long term safety of containment but I would add the fact that this area is destined to grow and become heavily populated and with the Yucca project present a serious threat to a great many people. It seems totally unfair to "dump" the entire magnitude of this country's most dangerous garbage on the state of Nevada and it's citizens. From a moral point of view I think it completely wrong for one state and one place in that state to be subjected to the risks both real and psychological. From a business/safety point of view many small units, warehouses, supplie
